Senator Folkes arose, in a brief speech of eloquence, presented the distinguished Senator with a chest of solid silver—forks, spoons, ladles. He referred to the thirty years' public service which Senator Kezell has given to the State. Senator Folkes paid a handsome compliment to Senator Kezell, saying that in all his long service not once had the finger of suspicion been pointed at him. He had ever been loyal, faithful, honest, and he believed that the people of Rockingham would continue to send him to the Legislature that the State might have the benefit of his broad experience, integrity and sound judgment.

Another policeman grappled with the fugitive as he turned to fire his last shot at pursuers and bore him to the street. He was quickly overpowered, disarmed and taken to police headquarters, where he was locked in a cell. Numerous complaints have been made to the police by citizens that they had received threatening and incoherent letters. An investigation showed that they were written by Muller, until three months ago an inmate of the State's insane asylum at Middletown, and a warrant was issued for him. It was the attempt to serve this that caused the tragedy.
